MOORE—How Shall I Woo?

5
'Tis sweet to think that where'er we rove
We are sure to find something blissful and dear;
And that when we're far from the lips we love,
We've but to make love to the lips we are near.
MOORE—'Tis Sweet to Think.

6
The time I've lost in wooing,
In watching and pursuing
The light that lies
In woman's eyes,
Has been my heart's undoing.
MOORE—The Time I've Lost in Wooing.

7
I sat with Doris, the Shepherd maiden;
Her crook was laden with wreathed flowers;
I sat and wooed her through sunlight wheeling,
And shadows stealing for hours and hours.

Ye shall know my breach of promise.

And but one to bid him go.

14
It was a happy age when a man might have wooed his wench with a pair of kid leather gloves,
a silver thimble, or with a tawdry lace; but now a velvet gown, a chain of pearl, or a coach with four horses will scarcely serve the turn.
RICH—My Lady's Looking Glass.

Woored, and married, and a',
Married, and wooed, and a!
And was she nae very weel off
That was wooed, and married, and a'?
ALEX. ROSS—Song.

16
A pressing lover seldom wants success,
Whilst the respectful, like the Greek, sits down
And wastes a ten years' siege before one town.

17
Lightly from fair to fair he flew,

For monarchs seldom sigh in vain.

Will you vouchsafe to teach a soldier terms
Such as will enter at a lady's ear
And plead his love-suit to her gentle heart?
Henry V. Act V. Sc. 2. L. 98.

20
She's beautiful and therefore to be woo'd:
She is a woman, therefore to be won.

Be merry, and employ your chiefest thoughts
To courtship and such fair ostents of love
As shall conveniently become you there.
Merchant of Venice. Act II. Sc. 8. L. 43.

22
Wooing thee, I found thee of more value
Than stamps in gold or sums in sealed bags;
And 'tis the very riches of thyself
That now I aim at.
Merry Wives of Windsor. Act III. Sc. 4. L.
15.

We cannot fight for love, as men may do;
We should be woo'd and were not made to woo.

24
Sigh no more, ladies, sigh no more,
Men were deceivers ever,
One foot in sea and one on shore;
To one thing constant never.

64. Not in original folio. See also THOS.

I was not born under a rhyming planet, nor I cannot woo in festival terms.
Much Ado About Nothing. Act V. Sc. 2. L.
40.

<sup>2</sup>
She wish'd she had not heard it, yet she wish'd
That heaven had made her such a man: she thank'd me,
And bade me, if I had a friend that lov'd her,
I should but teach him how to tell my story
And that would woo her.
Othello. Act I. Sc. 3. L. 162.

<sup>3</sup>
Was ever woman in this humour woo'd?
Was ever woman in this humour won?
Richard III. Act I. Sc. 2. L. 228.

<sup>4</sup> O gentle Romeo,
If thou dost love, pronounce it faithfully.
Or if thou think'st I am too quickly won,
I'll frown and be perverse and say thee nay,
So thou wilt woo: but else, not for the world.
Romeo and Juliet. Act II. Sc. 2. L. 93.

She is a woman, therefore may be woo'd;
She is a woman, therefore may be won.
Titus Andronicus. Act II. Sc. 1. L. 82.
(See also HENRY VI)

<sup>6</sup> Women are angels, wooing:
Things won are done, joy's soul lies in the doing:
That she below'd knows nought that knows not this:

Men prize the thing ungain'd more than it is.
Troilus and Cressida. Act I. Sc. 2. L. 312.

<sup>7</sup>
Win her with gifts, if she respect not words;
Dumb jewels often in their silent kind
More than quick words do move a woman's mind.
Two Gentlemen of Verona. Act III. Sc. 1. L.

<sup>8</sup> Never give her o'er;
For scorn at first makes after-love the more.
If she do frown, 'tis not in hate of you,
But rather to beget more love in you;
If she do chide, 'tis not to have you gone,
For why, the fools are mad if left alone.
Two Gentlemen of Verona. Act III. Sc. 1. L.
94.

Take no repulse, whatever she doth say;
For, "get you gone," she doth not mean, "away."
Flatter and praise, commend, extol their graces;
Though ne'er so black, say they have angels' faces.

That man that hath a tongue, I say, is no man,
If with his tongue he cannot win a woman.
Two Gentlemen of Verona. Act III. Sc. 1. L.
100.

Say that upon the altar of her beauty
You sacrifice your tears, your sighs, your heart:
Write till your ink be dry and with your tears
Moist it again, and frame some feeling line,
That may discover such integrity.
Two Gentlemen of Verona. Act III. Sc. 2. L.
73.

Bring therefore all the forces that ye may,
And lay incessant battery to her heart;

Playnts, prayers, vows, truth, sorrow, and dismay;

Those engins can the proudest love convert:
And, if those fayle, fall down and dy before her;

So dying live, and living do adore her.

SPENSER—Amoretti and Epithalamion. Sonnet
XIV.

<sup>12</sup>
Full little knowest thou that hast riot tried,
What hell it is in suing long to bide:
To loose good dayes, that might be better spent;
To waste long nights in pensive discontent;
To speed to-day, to be put back to-morrow;
To feed on hope, to pine with feare and sorrow.
SPENSER—Mother Hubbard's Tale. L. 895.

We spell it Y-E-S."

to do,

I said, "You get somebody else—or wait till I

WORLD PEACE

<sup>20</sup>
I am the last man in the world to say that the succor which is given us from America is not in itself something to rejoice at greatly. But I also say that I can see more in the knowledge that America is going to win a right to be at the conference table when the terms of peace are discussed. . . . It would have been a tragedy for mankind if America had not been there, and there with all her influence and power.

D. LLOYD GEORGE—Speech, at the Meeting of American Residents in London. April 12, 1917.

1 To Woodrow Wilson, the apparent failure, belongs the undying honor, which will grow with the growing centuries, of having saved the "little child that shall lead them yet." No other statesman but Wilson could have done it. And he did it.

GEN. JAN CHRISTIAN SMUTS—Letter. Jan. 8, 1921. Printed in N. Y. Evening Post, March 2, 1921.

2 It was the human spirit itself that failed at Paris. It is no use passing judgments and making scapegoats of this or that individual statesman or group of statesmen. Idealists make a great mistake in not facing the real facts sincerely and resolutely. They believe in the power of the spirit, in the goodness which is at the heart of things, in the triumph which is in store for the great moral ideals of the race. But this faith only too often leads to an optimism which is sadly and fatally at variance with actual results. It is the realist and not the idealist who is generally justified by events. We forget that the human spirit, the spirit of goodness and truth in the world, is still only an infant crying in the night, and that the struggle with darkness is as yet mostly an unequal struggle.

. . . Paris proved this terrible truth once more. It was not Wilson who failed there, but humanity itself. It was not the statesmen that failed, so much as the spirit of the peoples behind them.

GEN. JAN CHRISTIAN SMUTS—Letter, Jan. 8, 1921. Printed in N. Y. Evening Post, March 2, 1921.

3 Rules of conduct which govern men in their relations to one another are being applied in an ever-increasing degree to nations. The battlefield as a place of settlement of disputes is gradually yielding to arbitral courts of justice.

WILLIAM HOWARD TAFT—Dawn of World Peace. In U. S. Bureau of Education Bulletin. No. 8. (1912)

4 The development of the doctrine of international arbitration, considered from the standpoint of its ultimate benefits to the human race, is the most vital movement of modern times. In its relation to the well-being of the men and women of this and ensuing generations, it exceeds in importance the proper solution of various economic problems which are constant themes of legislative discussion or enactment.

But is worthy some worship of mine;

I will bow me down where my brothers bow,
Humble, but open eyed.

YOUTH

Young men soon give and soon forget affronts;
Old age is slow in both.
ADDISON—Cato. Act II. Sc. 5.

<sup>21</sup>
Youth dreams a bliss on this side death.
It dreams a rest, if not more deep,
More grateful than this marble sleep;
It hears a voice within it tell:
Calm's not life's crown, though calm is well.
'Tis all perhaps which man acquires,
But 'tis not what our youth desires.

<sup>7</sup> Blow out, you bugles, over the rich Dead!
There's none of these so lonely and poor of old,

But, dying, has made us rarer gifts than gold.
These laid the world away: poured out the red
Sweet wine of youth; gave up the years to be
Of work and joy, and that unhopèd serene
That men call age, and those who would have been

Their sons, they gave their immortality.

This is the Will of the Yukon,—Lo, how she

ROBERT W. SERVICE—Law of the Yukon.

20 There's a land where the mountains are nameless
And the rivers all run God knows where;
There are lives that are erring and aimless,
And deaths that just hang by a hair;
There are hardships that nobody reckons;
There are valleys unpeopled and still;
There's a land—oh, it beckons and beckons,
And I want to go back—and I will.

O darling stream! on balanced wings
The wood-birds sang the chansonnette
That here a wandering poet sings.

INDEXES

<sup>1</sup>
I certainly think that the best book in the world would owe the most to a good index, and the worst book, if it had but a single good thought in it, might be kept alive by it.
HORACE BINNEY—To S. Austin
Allibone.

<sup>2</sup>
So essential did I consider an index to be to every book, that I proposed to bring a bill into Parliament to deprive an author who publishes a book without an index of the privilege of copyright, and, moreover, to subject him for his offense to a pecuniary penalty.

LORD CAMPBELL—Lives of the Chief Justices of England. Preface to Vol. III.

An index is a necessary implement. * * *
Without this, a large author is but a labyrinth without a clue to direct the readers within.

FULLER—Worthies of England.

<sup>4</sup>
The index tells us the contents of stories and directs to the particular chapters.
MASSINGER and FIELD—
Fatal Downy. Act IV. Sc. 1.

<sup>5</sup>
How index-learning turns no student pale,
Yet holds the eel of science by the tail.
POPE—Dunciad. Bk. I. L. 279.

<sup>6</sup>
That roars so loud and thunders in the index.
Hamlet. Act III. Sc. 4. L. 53.

<sup>7</sup>
And in such indexes, although small pricks
To their subsequent volumes, there is seen
The baby figure of the giant mass
Of things to come at large.
Troilus and Cressida. Act I.
Sc. 3. L. 343.

CONCORDANCE TO QUOTATIONS

NOTE.—The indexed word is usually found in the phrase, indicated by its initial letter. When not found there it is to be understood that the phrase begins with the indexed word.

In general old spelling is not followed, but all words will be found under the correct form. This is the case with dialect, save when the spelling is so well known that the searcher would otherwise be misled. As the space allowed is often not adequate for a full phrase, unimportant words are omitted in order to convey the idea, although no word is changed.

The small black-faced figures that follow the page numbers indicate the numerical order of the quotation on the page.
